

SPI Exploratory Grants

The SPI Exploratory Grants offer funding to scientists active in polar and remote high-altitude regions to launch new short-term projects and collaborations or to fund additional field work and logistics.

Established scientists and postdoctoral researchers employed by a Swiss public research institution are eligible to apply. Collaborations with new teams or across disciplines are particularly encouraged, as is the participation in larger/international initiatives.

Successful applicants can receive up to CHF 40'000 towards the project costs.

Calls for proposals are issued annually by the Swiss Polar Institute and are open to all disciplines interested in the above-mentioned regions.
